ABSTRACT

Keywords: E-Learning, Computer Self-Efficacy, Flow experience, Learning Satisfaction, Intention of Use.

Keywords: E-Learning, Computer Self-Efficacy, Flow experience, Learning Satisfaction, Intention of Use.

The study aimed to investigate the relationship between learner's computer self-efficacy and intention of use in E-Learning. The research conducted quantitatively through survey. The result of this research is that learners' computer self-efficacy is significantly related to their intention of use. This research is of the opinion that the flow experience fostered in E-Learning circumstance result in high-level learning satisfaction and intention of use.

The study investigated the relationship between learner's computer self-efficacy and intention of use in E-Learning. The research conducted quantitatively through survey. The result of this research is that learners' computer self-efficacy is significantly related to their intention of use. This research is of the opinion that the flow experience fostered in E-Learning circumstance result in high-level learning satisfaction and intention of use.
REFERENCES