ABSTRACT

One of the main purposes of modern government is mainly on the provision of well and continuous services for people. As time changing and knowledge increasing, people will usually ask the government to do their job fully with creativity, aggressiveness, intelligence, elasticity, efficiency and effectiveness in reaching desired outcomes. Moreover, people also wish their government should have the abilities in setting their executive goals and strategic planning. Following the transformation and expansion of the government role and function, and the public interest towards government matter, the public hopes to see a revolution on the old government system, making the reorganizing of government role and function an important subject, and the civil service which was responsible for the country's political matter became a highlight of the revolution. Since the 80s, industrialized countries were facing the challenge of globalization, and to strengthen the nation's competitiveness, many concentrated on reinventing government and administrative revolution, and this gradually forms a revolutionary trend. Civil service was seen as the foundation of transforming government system, 'how to construct a entrepreneurial government and efficient system in order to promote government system transformation and upgrading the nation's competitiveness is a crucial subject'.
